PREFACE

The Tuskegee Negro Conference in this its forty-seventh year is adhering to the same sane consideration of problems fundamental to the development of rural life of the Negro people that has characterized its meetings in past years. Many of the measures which have been adopted under the present administration will be discussed and an effort will be made to project our thinking into the future in a constructive way. There was never a time in the history of our nation when programs of human betterment have had a greater chance for success. Let us hope that at this meeting will come programs and new vision with which to meet the problems of the future.
